DYNEGY MAILS LETTER TO STOCKHOLDERS

Dynegy’s Board of Directors Recommends Stockholders Vote FOR the Merger Agreement with Blackstone at November 17, 2010 Special Meeting of Stockholders

HOUSTON – November 2, 2010 – Dynegy Inc. (NYSE: DYN) today sent the following letter to its stockholders reiterating the recommendation of the Dynegy Board of Directors that they vote FOR the proposal to adopt the merger agreement with an affiliate of The Blackstone Group L.P. at Dynegy’s November 17, 2010 Special Meeting of Stockholders:

November 2, 2010

Dear Stockholders:

Your Board of Directors believes the Blackstone transaction is in the best interest of all Dynegy stockholders because it provides immediate, certain and fair value for your shares while reducing the considerable downside risk facing Dynegy if the Blackstone transaction is not approved and completed. Your Board recommends that stockholders vote FOR the Blackstone transaction on the enclosed WHITE proxy card today.

As we have previously communicated:

- No transaction other than the Blackstone proposal materialized over Dynegy’s two-year evaluation of strategic alternatives;
- Despite the broad solicitation of potentially interested parties during the 40-day “go-shop” period, no party made a proposal, much less one that was superior to the Blackstone offer;
- Dynegy’s significant leverage and $1.6 billion of forecasted negative free cash flow between 2011 and 2015¹ create a very challenging liquidity position over time;
- There is significant risk to Dynegy associated with a stand-alone strategy and those risks have increased since the announcement of the Blackstone transaction; and
- Dynegy’s stock price could fall to or below its pre-announcement stock price of $2.78 per share if the Blackstone transaction is not completed.

THE ANALYSES OF NUMEROUS INDEPENDENT SELL-SIDE ANALYSTS CONSISTENTLY APPEAR TO SUPPORT THE BLACKSTONE TRANSACTION AS THE BEST ALTERNATIVE AVAILABLE FOR DYNEGY STOCKHOLDERS

Numerous independent sell-side financial and credit analysts, who have a deep understanding of the power generation industry and Dynegy's financial condition, have published research reports that consistently appear to support your Board's conclusion that the Blackstone transaction is the best alternative available for Dynegy's stockholders:²

- “We believe the [Blackstone] deal will be consummated at the announced bid price since: 1) no better bid came during go shop period, and no parties made bid despite having contacted 40+ firms; 2) Blackstone is hard pressed to improve takeout price given precedent, and; 3) DYN is substantially more distressed than when deal was announced (had a 60% premium to share price at takeout).” – Julien Dumoulin-Smith, UBS, October 25, 2010
- “Based on our assessment of these public filings, Dynegy's financial profile is expected to be quite fragile, particularly during 2011 and 2012, when the company is projected to generate both negative operating cash flow and negative free cash flow due to weak operating margins and the required funding of their capital investment programs.” – Moody's, October 1, 2010
- “With the end of the 40-day period during which DYN was allowed to try to find a better offer than the one it currently has with Blackstone for $4.50 per Dynegy share, we are lowering our 12-month target price by $0.50 to the deal price of $4.50 as we do not expect a higher offer. During the period, DYN contacted some 42 parties and signed confidentiality agreements with 8 in an effort to find a better offer. However, no new proposals were made by any of those parties.” – Standard & Poor's Investment Advisory Services LLC, October 9, 2010
- “[Another bidder] looking to replicate the NRG deal with another party (NRG is locked in exclusivity), with the fall in Nat Gas prices and the depressed coal and gas units for sale in the market, those assets are unlikely to fetch the $1.36B NRG is paying for them. All said, there are significant financial hurdles for an interloping bid.” – Stephen Grahling, Jefferies & Co., October 5, 2010

Recent comments from NRG Energy, Inc.'s CEO, David Crane, reinforce the viewpoint of certain sell-side analysts regarding the difficulty in replicating the sale of four natural gas-fired assets proposed to be sold to NRG (the “NRG transaction”) concurrently with the closing of the Blackstone transaction:

- “We would re-price the transaction and it would re-price in a southward direction. All power plants are basically priced off the forward gas curve and the forward gas curve has gone down since the deal was announced.” – David Crane, Reuters, October 29, 2010

DYNEGY BELIEVES SENECA'S INTERESTS ARE NOT ALIGNED WITH THOSE OF ALL DYNEGY STOCKHOLDERS

In advance of the Special Meeting, Dynegy stockholders should ask themselves the following questions:

Are Seneca's interests aligned with those of all other Dynegy stockholders?

Dynegy believes they are not. Prior to the announcement of the Blackstone transaction, Seneca owned less than 1% of outstanding Dynegy stock. As recently as the day before the Blackstone transaction was announced, Seneca sold approximately 700,000 shares of Dynegy stock at $2.93. Based on this pre-Blackstone transaction announcement sale, it appears that Seneca very recently viewed $2.93 per share as a fair value for Dynegy. However, since the announcement of the Blackstone transaction Seneca has been a net purchaser of Dynegy stock, predominantly at prices in excess of Blackstone's $4.50 per share offer. In fact, beginning the day the transaction was announced, Seneca has purchased 62.6 million shares at an average weighted cost of $4.66 per share. All told, Seneca currently owns approximately 9% of Dynegy's outstanding shares. Perhaps the real question is: Why has Seneca accumulated such a large position – after the transaction was announced – at prices above the offer price?

If Seneca truly believes the Blackstone offer is undervalued, why didn't it hold the shares it sold at $2.93 or execute a non-disclosure agreement to receive more information about Dynegy and potentially submit a proposal in excess of Blackstone's offer during the 40-day "go-shop" period?

What is Seneca's motivation in attempting to defeat the Blackstone transaction?

What is Seneca's true economic interest in Dynegy?

Simply put, we believe Seneca is looking to advance its own interests at the expense of all other Dynegy stockholders. We further believe Seneca will seek to create value for itself dependent on what actions and what investments will yield it the greatest return, even if such actions or investments are not consistent with the interests of Dynegy's other equity investors. We know Seneca holds over-the-counter European-style call options, providing the right to purchase 1,986,900 and 904,100 shares of Dynegy common stock, respectively, at an exercise price of $1.00 per share as of January 21, 2011. We do not know what other Dynegy-related securities Seneca might own, including our debt securities and credit default swaps and other complex constructions of hybrid securities. We cannot rule out the possibility that Seneca has structured trades that would create significant additional value for Seneca by capitalizing on and profiting from a failed transaction with Blackstone.

In contrast, Dynegy's Board is looking after the best interest of Dynegy and ALL its stockholders.

How can Seneca conclude the current offer is unacceptable when they have no specific alternative? Does Seneca have a plan to effectively manage Dynegy on a stand-alone basis?

Seneca offers Dynegy stockholders no strategic plan. Seneca's SEC filings – including the one it made today – are completely devoid of any alternative by either Seneca or any other party that would deliver immediate value to Dynegy stockholders. Furthermore, Seneca fails to recognize that Dynegy's Board conducted a thorough review of strategic alternatives over the past TWO years to maximize value for its stockholders. In fact, Seneca's strategy appears to be solely dependent on the simplistic hope for a dramatic turnaround in natural gas prices. Dynegy's Board believes it is not in the best interest of Dynegy or its stockholders to predicate a go-forward strategy on the hope that the price of natural gas reverses its current downward trend. Seneca's recommendations to Dynegy stockholders have demonstrated a lack of experience in managing a public company like Dynegy, especially in a difficult economic environment. Dynegy has obligations to many stakeholders and must sustain itself to deliver value to all of its constituencies. Is risking Dynegy's stock price and future on the hope that natural gas prices will turnaround to a level well in excess of current market expectations a viable strategy? Hope is not a strategy and that is all Seneca is offering.

Why should Dynegy stockholders vote for the Blackstone transaction?

Despite its restructuring efforts, Dynegy continues to face challenges, many of which are beyond its control, including low and declining commodity prices driven by the large quantities of shale gas being developed in North America and continued economic weakness. Together, these two forces create significant risks and operating limitations for Dynegy's business, exacerbating Dynegy's substantial leverage and requiring Dynegy to access capital going forward.

If the Blackstone transaction is not approved and subsequently completed, Dynegy will likely breach its debt covenants by the end of the second quarter of 2011; Dynegy expects $1.6 billion of negative free cash flow between 2011 and 2015 and may be forced to restructure its balance sheet using one or a combination of several options, including issuing equity or equity-linked securities, implementing debt for equity swaps or selling assets at depressed prices. As a result, Dynegy's stockholders could lose not only the significant and immediate cash value inherent in Blackstone's premium offer, but could also face potential significant dilution and further loss on their investment as a result of any such subsequent restructuring activities.

YOUR VOTE IS IMPORTANT –
PLEASE VOTE FOR THE BLACKSTONE TRANSACTION TODAY

We have presented you with the facts, now it is time for ALL Dynegy stockholders to act. Your vote is extremely important, no matter how many or how few shares you own. Please take a moment to vote FOR the proposal to adopt the merger agreement today – by telephone, by Internet or by signing, dating and returning the enclosed WHITE proxy card in the postage-paid envelope provided. Please discard any gold proxy cards you receive from Seneca Capital and vote the WHITE proxy card today.
