Behind the Merger with Willie Deese

I think this merger is very important to MMD. If you think about what we said were the strategic directives for our division going forward; we said we wanted to be able to support emerging markets. This merger brings a broad footprint in emerging markets and capabilities that we are currently building. It brings great capability in the area of biologics and sterile manufacturing; capabilities that we currently are building. It brings a much broader footprint for manufacturing going forward. So all of those things are going to complement very well our current capabilities and I think in this case the addition of one and one is greater than two.

I'm excited about a number of things. I'm excited about the fact that we have a much broader footprint globally. I'm excited about the fact that our capabilities are expanding; specifically in biologics and sterile. I'm excited about the fact that we'll have greater capacity utilization at our factories. One of the greatest things that can happen in manufacturing is more volume. So when I think about what this merger does for us, it gives us the ballast to really move manufacturing and supply chain forward in a very advantageous way for the company.

The synergies that I would expect within manufacturing and the supply chain as a result of the merger are significant. We're going to continue on the lean journey that we've been on, Lean and Six Sigma; within manufacturing to provide greater efficiencies and greater customer satisfaction for our customers going forward.

We believe there will be greater sourcing opportunities; not only within MMD but across the company. This we believe will contribute greatly to the generation of the fifteen billion dollars we've talked about of free cash flow for the company post-2013.

Our pipeline is doubling it's gone from nine to 18. That means more new products coming into manufacturing, greater utilization of the factories that we have. It means that we have a much broader portfolio of inline products also more volume from manufacturing. The greatest friend of any manufacturing organization is volume. Going forward we should have a lot of it within the new company. I'm excited about our future because this positions us well to take advantage of the heightened supply chain capabilities that we will have in the new Merck.

Forward-Looking Statements

This communication includes “forward-looking statements” within the meaning of the safe harbor provisions of the United States Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Such statements may include, but are not limited to, statements about the benefits of the proposed merger between Merck and Schering-Plough, including future financial and operating results, the combined company’s plans, objectives, expectations and intentions and other statements that are not historical facts. Such statements are based upon the current beliefs and expectations of Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s management and are subject to significant risks and uncertainties. Actual results may differ from those set forth in the forward-looking statements.

The following factors, among others, could cause actual results to differ from those set forth in the forward-looking statements: the possibility that the expected synergies from the proposed merger of Merck and Schering-Plough will not be realized, or will not be realized within the expected time period, due to, among other things, the impact of pharmaceutical industry regulation and pending legislation that could affect the pharmaceutical industry; the ability to obtain governmental and self-regulatory organization approvals of the merger on the proposed terms and schedule; the actual terms of the financing required for the merger and/or the failure to obtain such financing; the failure of Schering-Plough or Merck stockholders to approve the merger; the risk that the businesses will not be integrated successfully; disruption from the merger making it more difficult to maintain business and operational relationships; the possibility that the merger does not close, including, but not limited to, due to the failure to satisfy the closing conditions; Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s ability to accurately predict future market conditions; dependence on the effectiveness of Merck’s and Schering-Plough’s patents and other protections for innovative products; the risk of new and changing regulation and health policies in the U.S. and internationally and the exposure to litigation and/or regulatory actions. Merck and Schering-Plough undertake no obligation to publicly update any forward-looking statement, whether as a result of new information, future events or otherwise. Additional factors that could cause results to differ materially from those described in the forward-looking statements can be found in Merck’s 2008 Annual Report on Form 10-K, Schering-Plough’s 2008 Annual Report on Form 10-K and each company’s other filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission (the “SEC”) available at the SEC’s Internet site (www.sec.gov).
