The new joint venture will encompass both the operations and distribution network of Fiat-Hitachi and Kobelco's European activities. CNH will own 75% of the new entity, Kobelco Construction Machinery Co. Ltd. (Japan) will hold a 20% interest, and Sumitomo Corporation will maintain its 5% stake. The action is concurrent with the ending of the European regional alliance between CNH and Hitachi Construction Machinery Company Ltd.

Beginning immediately, the line of heavy construction equipment previously sold under the Fiat-Hitachi brand will be sold under the Fiat Kobelco brand. These products, all of which utilize CNH technology and are built in CNH factories, include wheeled and crawler excavators, wheeled loaders, dozers, graders. In addition, the company's line of light equipment, including backhoe loaders and skid steer loaders will also be sold under the Fiat Kobelco brand.

In Europe, starting from January 2003, crawler excavators using Kobelco's state of the art Japanese technology will be manufactured in the company's San Mauro (Turin), Italy plant and sold under the Fiat Kobelco brand. Fiat Kobelco branded mini-excavators, also based on Kobelco technology, will be manufactured in Imola, Italy. Kobelco branded excavators will continue to be supplied from Japan.

"This key step in the formation of our global alliance with Kobelco strengthens our European distribution network through the addition of Kobelco's advanced and reliable Japanese technology," said Paolo Monferino, CNH president and chief executive officer. "The crawler excavator is the most important machine within the European construction equipment market, and technology remains the basic driver for success. Our network is eagerly anticipating the products that this alliance will deliver."

"Participation in Fiat Kobelco will enable us to establish a manufacturing presence in Europe," said Takashi Ishida, Kobelco president and chief executive officer. "We look forward to supplying the best-class excavators to the market. We are now able to supply a full line of construction machinery and to best serve the customer by holding both the manufacturing and marketing base in all three of the world's strategic markets through this alliance."
