ING U.S. provides further update on trading of U.S. mutual funds

ING U.S. (ING U.S. Financial Services and ING Investment Management) today filed an 8-K update with regulatory authorities on actions related to its earlier disclosure regarding trading practices in certain of its U.S. mutual funds. ING noted the filing exclusively refers to the U.S. funds and does not apply to ING funds in Europe or Asia. ING is confident the small number of irregularities identified in an internal review and described in the filings are isolated cases and not systemic. As previously reported, ING notes there is no material impact to the company.

Like most prominent financial services companies, ING received inquiries last year from regulators in the U.S. requesting information on market timing and late trading in mutual funds. Over the past year, ING conducted a thorough internal review and provided information based on that review to U.S. regulators. As of March 29, 2004, filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission became available for public access.

At the same time, ING took additional measures beyond the public filings to inform customers of the findings of its internal review. These findings were directly communicated to each of the nearly four million U.S. investment customers and institutional consultants spanning the United States and the company's mutual funds, retail variable products and 401k, 403b and 457 plans businesses. At this moment, ING U.S. awaits the outcome of regulatory review of the small number of isolated trading arrangements it uncovered through the internal review.

We conducted a thorough internal review, and were proactive in communicating our findings to customers and employees, said Fred Hubbell, chairman of Insurance Americas and a member of the Executive Board of ING Group. We remain convinced the small number of isolated instances we identified which occurred for the most part in companies before ING acquired them -- do not represent a systemic problem in any of the legacy companies that were involved, or in ING U.S. today. ING also greatly values every customer's investment in our funds, and we have publicly committed to appropriately reimburse any ING funds or its shareholders affected by inappropriate trading.
